Rubber Rubber Ernie (Jim Henson) from the album Sesame Street Book and RecordReleased1970Signed1970GenreChildren's, popLength2:25LabelColumbiaSongwriter (s) Jeff Moss Producer (s) Thomas S. Shepard Rubber Duckie is a song performed by Muppet character Ernie (voiced by Jim Henson) on Sesame Street. The song is named after Ernie's toy, a rubber duck affectionately named Rubber Duckie. The song, written by Jeff Moss and arranged by Joe Raposo, was first heard by children while watching an episode of Sesame Street on February 25, 1970. It was popular enough to be recorded as a 45-rpm single, and became an unexpected hit, peaking at #16 on the Billboard Hot 100 on September 26, 1970, and peaked at number 10 in Australia. (3) He was nominated for a Grammy Award for Best Recording for Children in 1971, but lost to The Sesame Street Book and Record, which contained the song. The song had follow-up songs Do De Rubber Duck and D-U-C-K-I-E and was the centerpiece of hoots the Owl's Put Down the Duckie in 1988, but also with Ernie. Other recordings and performances In 1971, one of the Irish Rovers sings the song in one sketch as part of an episode of The Irish Rovers Show. Little Richard performed a rock 'n' roll version of the song as a guest in a 1995 episode of Sesame Street. Bob McGrath recorded the song on his bob's Favorite Street Songs album. The song made a brief appearance in the scene in Three Men and a Little Lady, and during the episode Whose Line is it anyway? Daveed Diggs, dressed as Mr. Noodle's brother, performed a hip-hop-infused version on the Sesame Street YouTube channel. Little Richard also performed a rockabilly-ed version of the song, which can also be found on the official Sesame Street YouTube channel. Pianist Dick Wellstood included a rendition of the song in his 1974 concert, Walkin' with Wellstood. Jane Krakowski sings the song on her concert album The Laziest Gal in Town. I find the little guy who is cute and yellow and chubby Rub dubbing rubber Duckie you so well, and I'm lucky that you're my best friend. Duckie I love you today we have a little yellow duck that has become a bit of a cultural icon with the help of Ernie from Sesame Street and his signature song, Rubber Duckie. In 1970, he reached number 16 on Billboard's Hot 100 Singles list and was even nominated for a Grammy Award. The song was ridiculously catchy fun for little kids like me, singing constantly until told to leave the room. For those who missed this piece of music history, Ernie sings a song in the bathroom to his duck. It's an incredibly short song with lines like when I squeeze you, you make noise and have delicious rhymes as I find a little guy who is cute and yellow and plump, rub dub dubby. While the light on the lyrics, not many kids knew all the words so they just repeat the first couple of lines over and over again making the song even more annoying. But the popularity of the song really served to make rubber ducks a must-have bath toy for generations. But these little guys are not just for kids as there are also people who collect them. In 1996, Charlotte Lee began collecting various versions of the iconic duck and now has more than 5,600 different ducks decorating the shelves of glass cases in her special duck room. This, fortunately, earned her the Guinness Book of Records for the largest collection of rubber ducks. To truly enjoy them, of course, she would take them to Mumbai, India, which boasts the largest bathroom in the world. Like collectibles, many artists over the years have fallen on the bait of this duck. Giant floating rubber duck sculptures designed by Dutch artist Florentin Hoffman have been seen floating in rivers around the world. This and many other reasons make it clearly the most famous and famous bath toy on the planet. But for me, it was all about Ernie's love song. Without it, it would be just the odd yellow duck that creaked when you grabbed it. The idea of singing your devotion to a rubber toy of any kind is absolutely ridiculous. And that's exactly what made it absolutely awesome! It was so stupid that it made me giggle every time. And so memorable that I still remember to sing along. Not many things in life have such an impact and seeing a rubber duck still makes me smile. Whether it's the size of a small building or just the small version I had as a child. Maybe sometime there will be a new iconic toy bath to win the hearts of people all over the world, but to date at least rubber duckie, you are one!
